Complimentary Dance.
 The complimentary dance given by the Pace Orchestra on Wednesday night was well attended. A small unpleasantness ocured at the close that might have been avoided by a little more tact on the part of those who entertained and those who were entertained. These affairs are too pleasant in a somewhat dull time to be broken into by any little misunderstanding.
 The following statement from Pace's Orchestra explains itself:
 "As invited guests of ours to the dance Tuesday eve, April 24, 1906, we feel that in more than one respect some of the company accepted the affair more as an obligation than a compliment.
 The program was arranged with the intention of affording every one present equal entertainment. However it proved a failure in that we failed to secure the co-operation of all present.
 This, we sincerely regret as we had hoped and planned for an evening of mutual pleasure and enjoyment.
 To those who endeavored to co-operate with us in carrying out the program and making the affair a success, we wish to extend our sincere thanks.
 Respectfully,
 PACE'S ORCHESTRA."
